THE TIGER

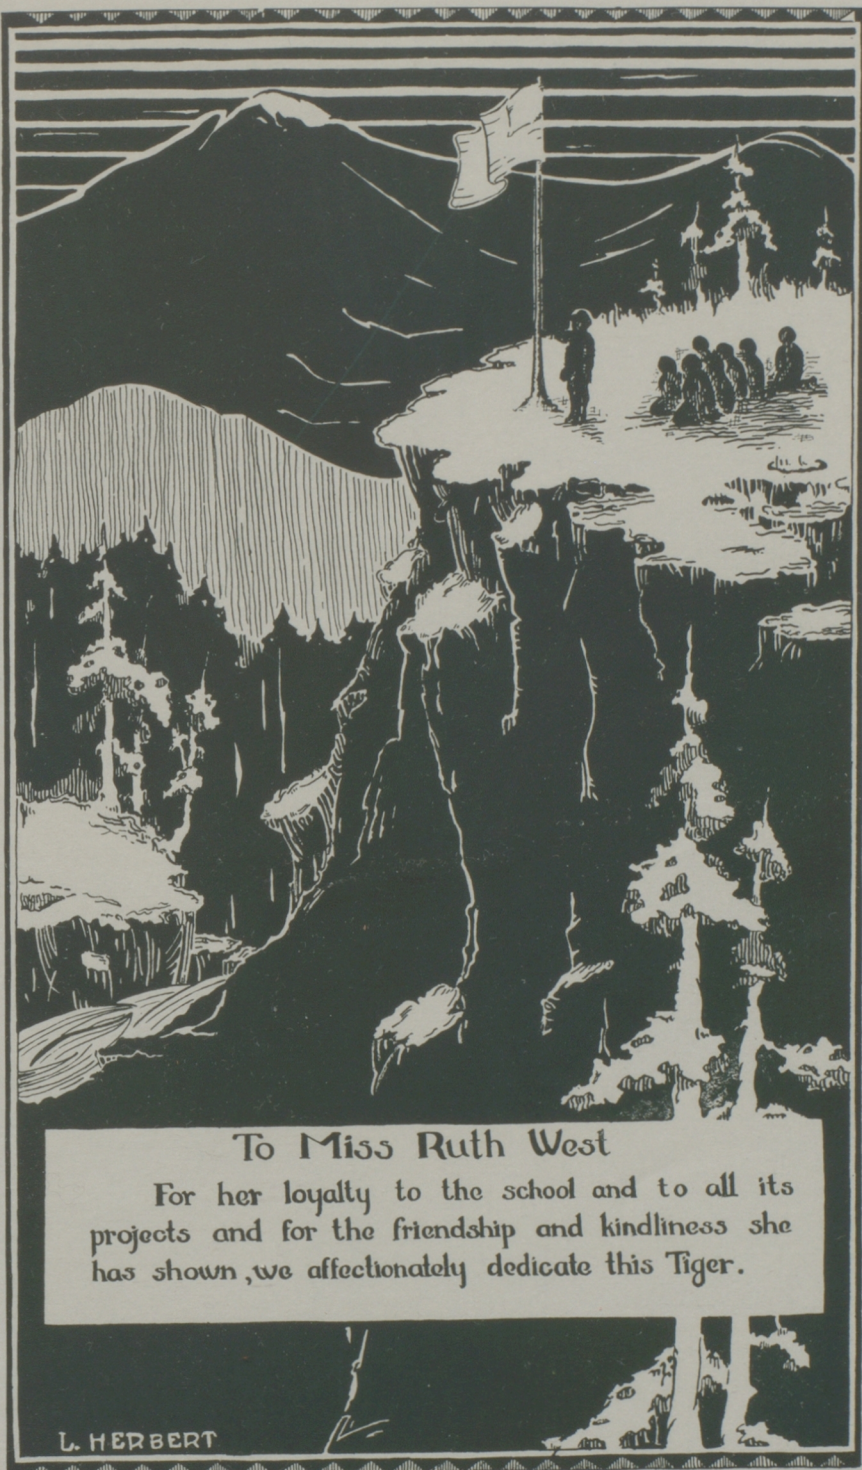

June, Nineteen Twenty-seven

Published by the Senior A Class of
THE LEWIS AND CLARK HIGH SCHOOL
Spokane, Washington

Miss Ruth West

Mr. W. M. Hart

To the Class:-

My wish for June,
'27 is that each of its members, with the passing of the years, will achieve the old adage that "the most lives who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts
the best."

Sincerely yours

Henry M. Hart,

Spokane

Girl in the Garden

A falling leaf—
A faded rose—
A crumbling petal—
Are all she knows
Of life. . . .

For in her garden
Of fragrant flowers
She has always passed
The speeding hours
Of life. . . .

With a book of verse,
A rose in her hair,
On a moss-grown rock
She has mellowed there
Thru life. . . .

A falling leaf—
A faded rose—
A crumbling petal—
Are all she knows
Of life. . . .

Class Will of June, 1927

E, THE CLASS OF JUNE, nineteen hundred and twenty-seven, being of a supposedly sane mind and about to emerge from the Tiger's lair for the first time in four or more years to enter upon another great battlefield, do hereby will and bequeath our most cherished possessions to those who are aware of our various vices and virtues (principally vices).

To those egoistical, supercilious ignoramuses, rightly dubbed "freshies" we bequeath the following sound advice:

1. Whisper or study in convocation; hiss or make jeering remarks about the speakers. They will have a good impression of the school.

2. Use that naughty little weed, the cigarette. It is very gentlemanly.

3. Walk in the halls until 8:29. The teachers will love you always and you will surely get your credit.

4. At the mid-semester clearance of lockers, scatter paper along the halls. It will greatly add to the beauty of the corridors.

5. Rush in ahead of others in cafeteria line. You'll get your lunch more quickly.

The following members of the class would like to take this opportunity to make bequests by which the under classmen will remember them:

I. Russell Hudgson wills his love of Wordsworth and other romantic poets to Mr. Williams. This isn't much, but we thought he would like something to recall his promising pupil.

II. Gwennie Hayden leaves those cute little ways of trying to vamp the masculine teachers to Minnie Heral.

III. Nelson Collard leaves his surplus height to John Dimeling. Now when John becomes a prospective graduate, he may be SEEN in senior meeting.

IV. Marguerite Reimers bequeaths her inevitable book "UNadditional Sidelights in American History" to Miss West. We trust she will get as much enjoyment from it as Marguerite did.

V. James Berkey wills his humor "colymn" with that sweet little dead proselyte, little Olly Voil, and "Forth Chumming Events" to Joe Mackoff so that Joe may persuade Mr. Miller his presence on the staff would be a great asset.

VI. Eleanor Smith bequeaths her appellation of "Half-pint" or "Ingersoll, junior," to Jean Logan, Frank Pineo, and

Bernard Berelson. Never mind. "Mighty oaks from little acorns grow."

VII. The members of The Journal staff leave all their mottos, inscribed in yellow chalk, to future embryonic journalists. "Loose tongues don't fit in business heads," is especially featured.

VIII. Lyle Prickett wills sweet memories of himself to Hildegard Paterson. Laura Frederick would like to make the same gift to her flaming youth, David Wiedeman.

IX. Ralph Edgerton wills his persuasive ways of making Miss Seigler think he knows the history lesson to Ervin Seale.

X. Saul Mackoff leaves his good opinion of himself to Harry Hoffman (Andy Gump II). We hope that Harry will improve the editorial and business ends of The Journal as much as he believes he can.

XI. The classical course takes great pleasure in presenting the library with a leather-bound copy of our favorite pony "Interlinear Translations of Caesar, Cicero, and Virgil." N. B.—The only string attached is that it be not kept on the reference table.

XII. Anna Thorne Fulton leaves that professional style of The Journal to Pearl Chapman. The Journal is certainly glad that one person can hand in copy without typographical errors.

XIII. Wheeler Cowen leaves his ability to get assignments finished on time to Frances Silberstein.

XIV. Marian Rigg bequeaths her acrobatic feat of "doubling up with a good man size snicker" to Mr. Livingston and M. d'Urbal.

XV. Jack Crampton gives his surplus hair to Messrs. Wenig and Teakle. Two beautiful toupees may be made with it.

XVI. Groome Gamble leaves his pet expression of "You infinitesimal, heterogeneous conglomeration of poor pusillanimous pulchritude" for John Theibe's pleasure. No doubt John's pastime will be to translate this choice little heterogeneous conglomeration.

XVII. Catherine Baker leaves her ability to be at a certain place at a certain time to Catherine Marr.

XVIII. Mary Herbst bequeaths her skill as a preacher to Olive Grobel. Twenty years hence we shall expect to hear of their great reformation movement at the North Pole.

XIX. Ralph Cooley (the only one of his kind in captivity) leaves the students and faculty free from his presence for the first time in many years. No wonder everyone seems to breathe more easily now.

XX. Margaret Weaver leaves the east wing of her brain to Kenneth McCluskey. Now Kenneth may play football with no fear of failing in any study.

XXI. "Dinty" More bequeaths one thousand packages of cigarette stubs and as many bottles of old Scotch to the person who will persuade the Eighteenth Amendment to be repealed.

XXII. "Tubby" Le Veaux wills his orange juice diet to Bertha Leibrecht and Frances Johnson.

XXIII. Dorothy Robinson leaves her class play lead to Ruth Swann.

XXIV. Dick Wiley wills his faculty of laughing over nothing to Leonard Kuhn. As if Leonard hasn't enough already.

XXV. Ray Paysse bequeaths to future undertakers all his secret formulas for driving a hearse and embalming dead bodies without seeing ghosts.

XXVI. Elizabeth Smith and Clarence Galloway, Betty Hall and Curtis Odell, and Dan Elam and Regine Bertling leave their records to others with as much patience and endurance.

XXVII. Katherine Mikkelson leaves her optimism to future editors of The Tiger. Undoubtedly there will be none so good as Kate.

XXVIII. Dorothy Myhre bequeaths her modest blushing ways to Mary Bevan. Mary could make good use of them.

XXIX. Little Edwin (Buddy) Newton, the woman hater, as he is fondly called by Mr. Fry, wills his title to Robert Dressel.

XXX. Eloise Caster, Gladene Beamer, Cora Mae Barringer, Louise Collins, Beverly Laughlin, Ruth Thomson, Jean Worthington, Helen McEachran, and Maryland Pattee, Mary McKinney, Angelyn Howells, and several others previously mentioned will their positions as society "tigresses" to Betty Caster, Helen Witherspoon, Harriet Matthews, Isla Ward, Jacqueline White, Betty Rogers, Margaret Anthony, Nancy Luhn, the Gilbert girls, Helen Whitehouse, Josephine Piolet, and Elaine Cash.

XXXI. The twins, Paul and Pearl Barton, Dana and Erlwein Harter, Sophie and Louise Loth, Alice and Ada Snape, Clifford and Clifton Sullivan, and Mary Verdery and Marion Doolittle leave their tiring phrase "Which is which?" or "How do you know whether you are you or your better half when you get up in the morning?" to other twins. This could hardly apply to Paul and Pearl.

XXXII. Ruth Herbst leaves her musical ability to Ellen Priebe.

XXXIII. Jimmie Connors leaves the presidency of the Senior A and B classes and the business management of The Tiger to the person most capable. And Jimmie is not so conceited as he might be.

XXXIV. Jack Dodd wills his leadership in the Boy Scouts to Alfred Marks. This does not include scholastic ability which is not much.

XXXV. Jane Dunning leaves a tennis racket and three dead balls to Hazel Dean.

XXXVI. George Wilkins and Alice Hertzka bequeath a strongly contested editor's chair to Mr. Miller.

XXXVII. Vivian and Jean Edmiston leave to other sisters their ability to get along in public.

LVIII. The remainder of us who have nothing worth mentioning except ourselves, will all our little idiosyncrasies to the faculty and students.

Signed in the presence of my better half, Mary Verdery Doolittle, this tenth day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-seven.

—Marion Doolittle.

Happy Days

Happy days are days gone by,
Days we think of with a sigh,
Lovely hours brief and frail
Seen through memory's mystic veil.

Happy days are days to come
Late or soon, we know not when;
But come they will or hopes are naught—
Idle dreams by fancy fraught.

Happy days are always here;
Not so glad when seen so near.
Time's perspective adds its smile
Growing greater all the while.

—Louise Loth.

The Class Prophecy

November 25, 1947

"Who would ever know the playfield with its new bleachers?" said Jimmy Connors, our class president. "It doesn't look much like the ones we were paying for in our high school days. Marion Rigg, the architect who designed them, certainly did a fine piece of work. The Lewis and Clark-North Central game will not start for an hour, but we must be here early so that we can see some of our old classmates. There is a place reserved for the June, '27 class."

"Hello! There are several couples coming now. There are Mr. and Mrs. Galloway (Elizabeth Smith). Have you seen any of the class lately?" he said.

Elizabeth told us that Eloise Caster was an x-ray specialist for Mayo's. "Gwenne" Hayden, who is in the Ziegfield Folies, was in Spokane yesterday and decided to stay for the game. She will be here soon. Russell Hodgson and the Dan Elams (Regine Bertling) arrived by aeroplane. Russell has just published a book "Critical Comments on Wordsworth With Several New Interpretations of the Poet." Dan is the president of the American Radio Association. Russel told us that Groome Gamble, who is a famous chemical engineer, is now testing for the presence of platinum on Mt. Spokane.

"Aren't these new bleachers attractive? Marion is very clever," commented Regine.

"Say what do you think I heard about Ralph Edgerton? He is practicing law at Spangle so that if it becomes necessary to declare bankruptcy he will not have to go far for free board," laughed Russell.

"Hello 'Okey,'!" hollered Jimmy. There was O'Connor, our old yell king. He lead us in a few snappy yells and showed himself as able as ever for the office. He said that he was representative for the William Wrigley, Jr., Company. The Harter twins came all the way from Hillyard, where they have a library of the world's shortest books. It is especially popular with the high school seniors.

We noticed Ralph smiling and upon inquiry he told us that Saul Mackoff was in Russia, giving the Bolsheviks lessons in English. Twelve lessons are all that are required by his method. He also said that Catherine Baker is editor-in-chief of the Medical Lake paper with James Berkey as humor editor. Jimmy said that the town was full of inspirations. Clarence Nelson and Conway Adams are in charge of the asylum there, but they were unable to be here as some of the patients had escaped and they had to hunt them. Their persuasive voices calm the craziest person. Gladene Beamer came and she told us that Mary McKinney was the leading lady in the Maylons. Gladene is an interior decorator.

The game has just started and it looks as if we were going to have a walkaway with the Indians this time. "Curt Odell is the coach and perhaps that accounts for it.

Margaret Smith, Marjorie Smith, and Dorothy Anderson, who live in Missouri, are teaching in the university there.

"Do you want to hear the best joke of the season?" asked Russell. "Mr. and Mrs. Byron MacMillan (Eleanor Smith), whom we all remember as Half Pint, are missionaries in Alaska for the Eskimoes."

"Here is the effect dress regulation had on some. Cora Mae Barringer, who was our president of the Girls' Federation, is trying to establish dress regulation for all high school girls. Katherine Miller, Margaret Weaver, and Florence Swan are opposing it," informed Gladene.

Katherine Mikkelson and Dorothy Myhre are in the Mikkelson Grain Company as president and secretary, respectively. Rose Ackermann and Lenore Peach are the Spokane representatives. Harold Corner and Jack Crampton have a soft drink parlor on Trent Avenue, and it is rumored that there is something besides that.

"O, Glen Wanamaker is posing for collar ads," said Rose. "He was so sorry that he could not be here. Katherine saw his picture on a bill-board coming out. Jane Dunning is an interior decorator in Seattle and has Mary Kinniburg and Viola Jane Jewett as her assistants. Mary Herbst is an evangelist conducting a revival meeting on the north side."

"Say, did you know that George Wilkins is editor of the 'POSTPONED DAILY'? exclaimed Ralph. "Their motto is 'Yesterday's news tomorrow.' Anna Kuble writes the Dorothy Dix column. Dorothy Robinson is playing on Broadway now, according to the paper."

"That reminds me," said Jimmy. "William Cowley is sport editor of the Chronicle. By the number of editors here we ought to get some good writeups."

"Babe" Grimm, who plays with the National League, said that the game was remarkable (the score is now 40-0 end of the half). Herbert Higgins, Gerald Pool, Jack Dodd, Junius North, and Emmett Talkington, who are the city council of Mica, came all that distance to be present.

"Here are some choice bits of gossip," said Joe Boyd. "Marguerite Reimers has just published a book, 'How One Person Can Run a Newspaper.' The publishers are swamped with orders. Edwin ('Bud') Newton has just secured a divorce from his fourth wife; he refuses to say who she is; however, it is a dark secret. Paul Barton and Bill Krause are members of Congress. Paul is a democrat and has been very successful in getting the bill passed which supports the bill making soundless pianos for apartments." Joe was very excited when we made another touchdown.

"Warren McDaniel is owner of the Marcel Shoppe with Ray Paysse as demonstrator. 'Bud' Tichbourne, the new owner of the Gillette Razor Company, poses for his own ads." stated Herbert.

Pearl Barton, Kathleen Ford, Louise and Sophie Loth, and Ada and Alice Snape are in South America. Laura Frederick is writing feature stories on "Peculiarities of Teachers at Teas." Her high school experience was very valuable. Kathryn Aller and Ruth Boyle are teaching school at Fish Lake. Isobel Meldrum is in Australia. Dick Gemberling is trying to prove that the moon is made of green cheese. So far he hasn't come to any definite conclusions. Quite a few of our class enjoy life in Washington, D. C. Maxine Nelson, who lives there, is a professional dancer and Rose Wosepka is with her. "Peggy" Rockwell is composing jazz. Giovanna Larson has a shop in New York.

"'Dinty' More is a lobbyist in the Senate, trying to get a low tariff on tobacco in all its form and likewise on certain beverages. Jimmy Lawson is warden at Sing Sing," said Harvey Nelson. 'Tubby' LeVeaux gave me his book 'How I Became Thin Overnight.' It is almost as popular as the orange juice diet was when we were in school. I didn't recognize Ernest Simons at the hot dog stand. Jack Welborn is in command at Fort Wright, and consented to lower himself enough to witness the game."

"By the way," said Harry Horswill, a former member of Papyrus, who is using his literary talent to edit College Humor, "Wheeler Cowen is president of the Cowen Tire Company of Tacoma. He got his start shooting rubber bands in the Journal office. Lyle Prickett is teaching French in Lewis and Clark at the recommendation of M. d'Urbal. I wonder when he learned to 'parlez-vous.' Here's Wheeler now."

"Clark Burrel, Hollister White, and Leslie Hoag have extensive lumber interests in Canada. I just returned from there," said Wheeler. "David Flood was successful in getting the Columbia Basin Project across."

Vivian Edmiston has just finished a collection of 'Bright Sayings of Children.' She is now with her sister on a tour of Europe. They wrote that Ruth Herbst plays in one of the famous cabarets of Europe.

"Charles Larson has at last realized his life-long ambition. He has just been made Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan. He has always had a keen interest in that organization. Elaine Hammer is president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Eugene Gollihur and Dick Whiteleather are in the navy now," commented Harry.

"Whee!" screamed "Okey," "We have made another touchdown, and it was because of a run for the entire length of the field. The score is now 53-0. 'Curt' is certainly a good coach."

"Did you know that Alice Hertzka is trying to start a colony in Africa for disillusioned editors? There are several L. C. grads there now; among them are Bob Kipp, Clyde Parent, Isabelle Ross, Anna Thorne Fulton, Alma Heflin, Bruce Powell, Mildred Meier, Margaret Brooks, and Nellie Buckley," was George's part of the conversation.

"Iola Nixdorff is the leading American poet of the day. Joel Kola is an art instructor in the Chicago Institute of Fine Arts. Betty Hall is the wife of our famous coach. Earl Oke holds the championship of the United States for sleeping. If one looks long enough at him, he will immediately fall into a deep slumber. Ruth Surplice is secretary to John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Mrs. Charles Libby (Jean Worthington), Rosalind Pennaluna and Ruth Thomson are Vogue models," said Jimmy.

"Let's have another reunion in five years at this same place and maybe we can run away with the Indians again with a score of 60-0," was Jimmy's final suggestion.

"Yes, let's" came from all the others in chorus.

Sense and Sensibility

ALL the humble, lowly articles of dress, shoes are the lowest in both importance and position. Just lately, however, they have begun to have much significance to me. I have always been more or less in revolt over my shoes, but on the last occasion of purchasing them, I made a more determined stand than usual.

All my life my parents, or more especially my father, have insisted that I wear sensible shoes—not ordinary sensible shoes, but ultra sensible ones, with names like “Socket-Fit” and “Ground Gripper.” It would be different if there were anything wrong with my feet, but there is not. The theory is simply that these astonishingly ugly shoes will keep feet perfect.

All my life my schoolmates have commented on my footwear. Some of their remarks have been scornful, some curious, other sympathetic, depending on their temperaments and ages. All have been astounded to discover that I was trying not to cure some foot trouble but to prevent it. Although to the rest of the world I have tried to maintain an air of indifference and calm superiority, I have always implored my parents to buy nice, ordinary shoes, which were not so obviously sensible. On various occasions they have relented, but invariably the experiment has proved a failure. I laid this, however, to the fact that I had not had enough to say in any of these cases.

This time I offered to take full responsibility. It was understood by all concerned that the shoes were to be suitable for school, that they were to be sensible, that they were to be low-heeled, and that they were to be good-looking.

A very simple order, I decided. All that would be necessary would be to step into any shoe store, and half a dozen pairs would immediately appear. There might be some difficulty in choosing from among them, but that was a minor matter. Unsuspectingly, I entered a shoe store.

I soon discovered that clerks consider almost anything suitable for school wear. My horizon, or rather my tastes, suddenly seemed even more limited than I had supposed. I found, too, that neither real estate salesmen nor yet life insurance writers are the most persuasive talkers in the world. That glory belongs to the shoe clerks. As an illustration of their powers, I may say that I walked out of the first shop I entered carrying a pair of shoes.

At home I discovered that they were not suitable for school, that they were not sensible, that they were not low-heeled—and, worst of all, that they were not good-looking. My courage failed me when I realized that they would have to be returned. I declared that I could not take them back, the clerk had been so very pleasant, it would be cruel to him, and it would be very embarrassing to me.

My father returned them for me. I can imagine with what pleasure he would part with such utterly foolish shoes. Both my parents reminded me, however, that it was the last time that I was to change my mind. I heartily agreed with them, but I had several agonizing experiences escaping from over-zealous salespeople.

I found in the course of my shopping that I must ask for flat-heeled shoes. When these were presented, they were always either impossibly square-toed and deformed-looking, or else they were a sickly yellow in color.

Finally I appealed to my mother. I was positive that there were desirable shoes somewhere in town, but I needed assistance in finding them. She consented to help me, and we went into more shops and saw more square-toed, orange-yellow shoes. I began to be sick of the whole procedure.

Said mother in a guileless voice, "I hear that the Ground-Gripper store has some new styles. Shall we look at them?"

I was too enfeebled to protest, so I looked wearily into the show case. Before me I saw the pair of shoes for which I had been searching for a week. We went in and bought them.

At present I am wearing offensively sensible shoes. My rebellion is a failure, and I am beginning to wonder whether I did know what I wanted. Anyhow I didn't get it.

—Catherine Baker.

Love Song of a Fickle Lover

You ask me do I love you? Why brown-eyed mavourneen—
You're the sweetest girl in all the world—well, at least of those I've seen;

And I'll love you till the singing and the trilling of the stars
Make the people here on earth think they are radioed by Mars.
Honest Injun, Yes! I'll love you till the stars in Heaven crash,
And a donkey buys a diamond from an elephant for cash.
I will love you till the hop-vines grow down instead of up,
Even though you turn to canibal and on me gaily sup.
I'll love you till the waters of the oceans turn to glue,
Well, at least until I meet one to take the place of you.

—Alma G. Heflin.

Just Somewhere, U'Know

HE WAS a very old woman, was Nora Crawley; she was a very silly old woman—everyone admitted that—and yet sometimes, against your will, you felt sorry for her. She had bobbed gray hair, modishly shingled very short; she wore impossibly high heels when she should have been wearing Ground Grippers, or Arch Preservers; she adored brilliant, frivolous sport clothes and horrible checkered stockings; her skirts were as high as the best of them, and sometimes she dared to flash defiantly, a gaudy bracelet or a wristwatch about her absurd ankle. Oh, she was a terrific old person, but under her dreadful sport things, and under her rouged old face, and under her glittering bangles, she hid something rather bruised and pitiful.

* * *

She was a very young thing, was Joan MacDowell; she was a very silly young thing, and something more than good-looking. But it was quite excusable for her to be silly, because she was very young, and very lovely, and very excited. She had a small, beautiful head and an astonishing haircut. A lot of it on one side in short, black ringlets, you know, and hardly any on the other. Her lips were a bright, smooth scarlet; her eyes were a clear, deep blue, fringed with lashes like ponds with rushes. With these eyes she looked at you calmly and yet piercingly, and sometimes disconcerted you. And she was rather fond of Life because it was being so good to her.

The sun was shining in a way that made you think of "checkered shade," and dancing, and singing, and doing things that you would not think of doing otherwise. You know the kind. So it made Joan MacDowell and Jerry O'Flynn, sitting in a roadster at the side of a country road, feel. And Joan was saying:

"Let's go somewhere, Jerry darling."

"Let's," agreed Jerry. "Where?"

"Just somewhere," insisted Joan, as if she liked the sound of the word.

"Right," said Jerry, "just somewhere, then." But they both knew that "Somewhere" meant a swim in the cold, clear waters of a lake, and supper at a little table whose polished surface reflected lanterns strung above, and dancing to music intermingled with the soft sound of lapping waves. That was "Somewhere."

"Look," cried Joan suddenly, and reached out her hand and plucked a single raspberry dangling over the fence beside them. She held it to the light, and it became a soft, transparent drop. "Isn't it lovely?" They laughed. It was so lovely. The sun, in its odd way, slanted down upon Jerry's square, bright head, and upon the spread wings on the hood of the roadster, and turned the road ahead of them into a mysterious pathway which might lead to a thousand wonderful places. The sun can do beautiful things. They drove on, and their eyes were bright with laughter.

And down the road, a farmer's wife, whose face this same sun had beaten a deep, earthy brown, picked raspberries with tired, stained hands, and dropped them one by one into a pail. Of course, she did not hold them to the light, so she wondered why these children laughed.

Another roadster, a squat, expensive thing, painted a garish cream and green, was pulling away from a dusty curb in the city. At the wheel lolled someone in a rakish burnt-orange hat, a short dress splashed wickedly with cubes and wheels and diamonds, and bracelets—gobs and gobs of bracelets, too many bracelets. And from under the rolled and girlish brim of the rakish hat, peered out oddly, the wrinkled face of Nora Crawley. A golden slave collar—that hideously girlish ornament—hung on her thin neck. A tight, ceaseless, painted smile curved her lips hurtfully. In passing, a small, tactless, hurrying child in a dirty shirt stopped, let fall his jaw, and stared and stared.

A purposeful bevy of young men shot then, out of a door opposite. Young men in vivid sweaters and matching sox; exciting young men. Nora Crawley's smile curved higher.

"Hello, Nora!" they shouted, seeing her. Nora's hand waved madly. "Where going?" The cream and green car had stopped moving.

"Somewhere," she answered with arch mysteriousness, "don't you wish you were, too?" Words full of hidden meaning and eager invitation.

"Yeah," they agreed, starting toward a car that Nora had not seen before, "awful hurry now. See y' later." Nora looked at the car, and saw there a girl whose light hair lay in burnished points against her cheeks, whose sparkling slave collar encircled a throat white, and full, and smooth with youth, whose eyes were wise and dark with mockery. Nora Crawley turned away. These youngsters looked, for a moment, after the foolish blur of cream and green.

"Gad, doesn't she turn your stomach, Pat?" One of them asked the girl with the burnished hair.

"Upside down," said Pat, lazily making room for them beside her. "She causes me to snicker."

"Somewhere," mimicked a boy cruelly, "she's always going 'Somewhere.' I hope she gets there." They waited until another of their number came from the door. Then spoke Pat:

"Oh, hurry up, let's go somewhere!" You see, they had already forgotten.

Nora Crawley stood in front of the caddy-house at the Country Club, and talked to a crowd of men. A careless wind billowed out her short bright skirt and swept her graying hair from her flushed face. This same wind wafted fragments of her talk to the listening porch. Nora Crawley talked very loud in imitation of youth's unconscious noise.

"Does she know," demanded Mrs. Horace Fawkes, who sat upon the porch, and who was very large and settled, "that she's making such a ghastly fool of herself?" And someone near answered:

"She doesn't know. She couldn't. I think she actually made herself believe she's as young as Joan there." They all looked at Joan MacDowell—Joan, bright-eyed with the dreams of endless tomorrows, her young body quivering with the thought of new adventure, her wise, smooth lips half-parted, and laughed and laughed at the bitter mockery of the comparison.

When Nora Crawley sauntered up the steps, the laughter and the clattering tongues were stilled. Nora, under a cynosure of eyes, was at her best. Sloping her thin shoulders, locking her hands over one hip, she leaned against a pillar—ever so youthfully.

"Well—" she drawled with the slowest ease, "how's everybody?"

"Top-hole," answered Joan MacDowell. Malice might have lurked in the blue pools behind their screens of rushes. "How's you, Nora?"

"Great! Never better—absolutely!"

Quite unexpectedly, with a smooth, rippling motion, Joan rose from her chair, and with the same smooth motion, came to where Nora Crawley stood. You might scarcely have thought she saw Nora at all, because her deep eyes were on Jerry O'Flynn, over in the door of the caddie-house, but there was something oddly cruel and feline about her as she faced the older woman. In brutal contrast, Nora Crawley seemed to shrink and shrivel before the arrogant power of the girl's figure—and people watched; the crowd of men who had just mounted the stairs, some waitresses behind a curtain—all of them.

"My dear," Joan's voice rippled too, "your figure is marvelous. Tell me what you do!"

"Lamb chops and pineapple," cackled Nora Crawley in delight, "absolutely. Doesn't it work wonders?" Joan's lashes shadowed and hid whatever her eyes might have held.

"Ab-solutely." Her rippling voice lingered over the word. "I must try it." She went on, down the stairs to meet Jerry, who was coming up. And Nora Crawley, her face a moveless, painted mask, went to take the empty chair.

But even in the fierce eyes of Mrs. Horace Fawkes, there was a terrible pity.

There was immense bustle and hurry. The youngsters were going on a kind of "picnic" and they were very busy trying to ditch Nora Crawley, who thought she was going with them. Into the back seat of a huge and disreputable car they crammed pillows and pickles and layer cakes and cretonne coats.

"Now—" shouted Jerry O'Flynn, "all set—jump!" They jumped. They had scarcely rounded the corner before Nora Crawley's atrocious machine drew up in their place.

"Now isn't this lucky," said Nora Crawley, "I'm here before any of them!" She waited stupidly for half an hour. Three quarters of an hour.

"Well," said Nora Crawley brilliantly at last, "I must have missed them." You see, not even to herself would she admit that she was not wanted.

It had been a long and lovely day. Nora Crawley hadn't found them. Of course she hadn't. How could she, when it was a place which they themselves had found only after wandering endlessly along a devious road? They had parked the huge old car beside a whispering stream and sauntered now, in gay groups along a crooked pathway, curiously golden in the last sunlight.

Faintly from afar, something reached them. Something strangely familiar in its wailing cadences.

"That's Nora Crawley's horn," said Jerry tersely.

"Yes—but where?"

Very oddly and quickly, the question was answered. Around a sharp little curve, over a deceiving little mound, its nose flattened like a bull pup's, bent and twisted and rammed hard into the ditch, was Nora Crawley's silly roadster—silly even in its downfall. And Nora Crawley herself was like a spineless doll. So funny. One long, thin, checkerboard leg flung over the marred green side; a rent in the scarlet gigolo, through which her graying hair showed; the torn end of a painted scarf flapping about her face. They laughed. And Nora laughed with them.

"Don't—I—look funny?" She spoke a little jerkily. And then they stopped laughing because they suddenly saw that the steering wheel was crushed in an ugly way against her chest. They were all at once trying to lift its hideous weight from her.

"Don't—bother." Her voice was rather old and tired. She did not try to speak in imitation of youth's unconscious noise. A thin stream of blood trickled from the corner of her mouth, and Joan MacDowell screamed a bit. "I'm awf'ly old—y' know," Nora Crawley announced calmly. She glanced about at their pallid, youthful faces. "Don't—look so—please. It's not so bad—really." Her eyes were queer and bright. "I'm going to tell you—why I've been such a—fool. I never had any fun—when I was young. I—wanted to—make up for what I'd missed. I was an awful—wallflower—that's why I've acted—this way. A clown, rather. You had such fun. I wanted to share it—oh, I knew what you thought of me—but how could I—go back—after I'd gone so far? And I always said—I—was going 'Somewhere'—because I never was going—anywhere—and I didn't know—what else to say—I'm glad—I made you—laugh—anyway—" The tired voice flickered out.

On her impossibly high heels, Nora Crawley stalked gallantly out of life.

The night was soft and warm, and there was the scent of fresh things about—clover, and hay, and flowers moist with dew. Out upon a rocky ledge, far above the city, Jerry and Joan sat in Jerry's roadster and watched the twinkling lights.

Spoke Pat's lazy voice suddenly behind them:

"Wake up, you! The night's young yet. Let's go somewhere!" Jerry saw Joan's smooth scarlet lips contract unaccountably.

"Don't ever say 'Somewhere,' Pat—it reminds me of Nora Crawley."

"All right." Pat's voice lifted itself again above the soft whirr of the wheels. "Let's go to Haverly Hill and dance!"

—Marion Rigg.

Song

Early I learned
Never to love.
Early I lost
The ways of the dove
That hushes along on purpled wings,
And late to the rose-eve softly sings.

Early my heart
Was bitter weed.
(Ah, little faiths
So quick to bleed!)

Now in the light
Of lilac spray,
All things have shrivelled
To utter clay.

Early I learned
Never to love.
Early I lost
The ways of a dove.

—Iola Nixdorff.

Four Years at Lewis and Clark

Four years of toil within these walls,
Four years of worry and of fun;
Now we, the class of '27
But pause to ask, "What have we done?"

What have we brought to Lewis and Clark
To keep unfurled her flag of fame?
What efforts have we ever made.
To glorify her stalwart name?

In '23 as frosh we came
In knee pants suits and ribboned hair,
And took upon our shoulders then,
The freshie burdens waiting there.

474 we numbered then,
And fully strong we worked and sweat
To realize the "organ dream,"
The goal that was already set.

When from dim shadows on the wall
It loomed out in reality,
A famed artist came from far and played
Upon it his great melody.

We'd just become the Junior class,
When for another goal we found
Fifty-two acres on the hill,
To make into the school playground.

We've done our bit these last three years,
That we might have upon this tract,
A place for every kind of sport,
Beneath the colors, Orange and Black.

We've lent a hand in ball bazaars,
Supported every kind of game,
Helped make a perfect banking score,
And kept it every week the same.

With Jimmie Connors at the head,
And Higgins working at his side,
As one we banded to the end,
To check all ill turns of the tide.

True Tigers we have aimed to be,
Real "Elsies" to the very core,
Though as a whole we've done quite well,
A few did just a little more.

Groome Gamble with the master mind
Led twelve score ten with pen and book,
Miss Weaver a few steps behind,
The place of second honor took.

George Wilkins and Miss Robinson,
The leads in "To the Ladies" played,
And all the others on the stage,
A fitting background for them made.

Miss Barringer to help the girls,
Her time gave most unselfishly,
And then as president of them all,
Passed rules of dress efficiency.

To Hodgson and Miss Mikkleson,
Miss Dunning, too, is owed success
Of this June Tiger. Their hard work
Sent all the good results to press.

"Harve" Nelson, "Tubby" and Odell,
With active minds and fine physique
As high point men on field of sport,
Made boys to yell and girls to shriek.

Four years! 'Twas pinioned with the wings,
That on the fastest eagles grow,
And now the great door open swings,
To let this class of seniors go.

We'll slip into our robes of grey,
And set our caps upon our head,
Bid au revoir to high school days,
But all the rest we'll leave unsaid.

Within our hearts there'll always be
A tender spot for Lewis and Clark,
Whose guiding hands prepared us for
Our journey in this worldly ark.

—Laura P. Frederick.

Sea Dreams

I can sense in the wind
The salt of the sea,
And it ever has been
A pleasure to me.

It brings to my mind
The swoop of the gull,
And the billowing bulk
Of a great ship's hulk

And the coves that are hidden
Along the shore line
By the cloud-ridden sky—
By the towering pine.

The tang of the sea
And the glint of the moon,
The song of the wind,
While love sings a tune.

I wish I could sail
Out into that space
On the bow of a ship
With the spray in my face.

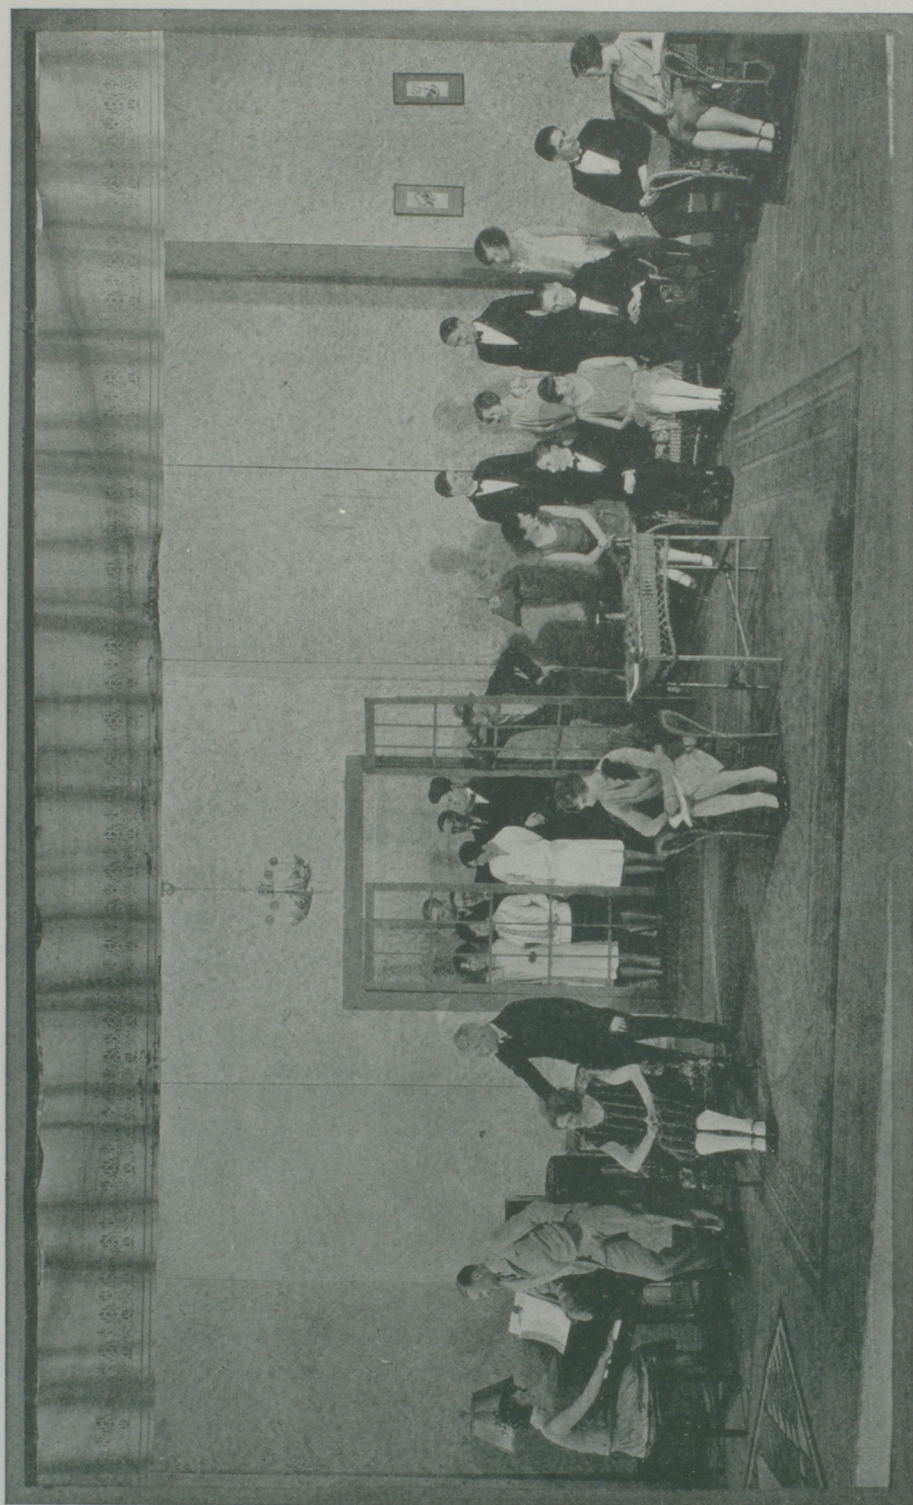

—Mary Alexandrene McKinney.

Comparison

See how the cynic stands in lofty ease,
His philosophic pose a mighty one.
He thinks he knows the final end of ends—
The sacred burning purpose of the sun.
His lashes are a veil he cannot see
Who thinks the valley is a tiny spot,
Who thinks his thoughts can quickly cull the fruit—
The godlike-golden apples from the rot.

He sees the foolish strivers striving on,
And clutching at a dream far in the skies.
The bitter lash of purpose cuts away
The cancerous veil of darkness from their eyes.
He shouts "What purpose?" to the star blind horde—
"The paths of glory to the grave are led!"
And so they are—but, scoffer, idling there,
So also is the earthly path you tread.

—Iola Nixdorff.

Class Play

Class Play

One more bouquet was handed to the ladies from behind the footlights when the class play "To the Ladies" was presented in the Lewis and Clark Auditorium on April the first.

The play, full of comedy and tragedy, deals with the life of some employees of the John Kincaid Piano Co.

Leonard Beebe, a clerk, believes in all get-rich-quick-schemes and because of this mortgages his grand piano to buy a grape fruit farm in Florida.

Mr. Kincaid calls on the Beebes and asks them to the annual Kincaid banquet. Leonard is to make a speech, which is a great honor.

Mr. Beebe memorizes a prepared speech and Tom Baker memorizes the same one; as he was called on first he gave the speech, leaving Mr. Beebe without one.

Mrs. Beebe saves Leonard by making a speech and pretending that her husband has laryngitis. He is advanced on the merit of this speech, but Mr. Kincaid finds out about it owing to a blunder on the part of Chester Mullins, a friend of Leonard's. Mr. Beebe is demoted, but Mrs. Beebe talks to Mr. Kincaid and discloses the fact that Mrs. Kincaid is the brains of the Kincaid business. Mr. Beebe is reinstated and the women continue to run the business.

Dorothy Robinson, as Mrs. Elsie Beebe, carried convincingly her part of a young wife very much in love. She had a fine stage voice and was charming in her part.

George Wilkins portrayed a young business man, Leonard Beebe, who was rather conceited and in love with his wife.

The comedy part was ably handled by William Krause as Chester Mullins. Donald Moore and Charles Larson, as the piano movers, caused a great deal of mirth among the audience.

Ralph Edgerton made a great hit in his portrayal of John Kincaid. His voice was deep and resembled that of an older man perfectly. Ruth Surplice made a very dignified wife, and seemed capable of running the Kincaid business.

Helen McEachran, who has a very charming stage appearance, was an efficient stenographer.

Lyle Prickett as toastmaster assumed excellently the part of an elderly man.

Nelson Collard, as Tom Baker, caused a great deal of excitement when he gave his speech.

Other characters were:

Senator Cassidy	-----	Paul Barton
The Photographer	-----	Saul Mackoff
The Barber	-----	Russel Hodgson

Guests at Banquet:

Gladine Beamer	Lenore Peach	Regine Bertling
Maynard Rollinson		Dan Elam
Marjorie Smith		Jean Worthington

Waitresses:

Rose Ackerman	Helen Patterson
Elizabeth Ann Smith

The ushers wore smart sport costumes and added color to the scene. The ushers were:

Kathryn Schnabel Head Usher
Beverly Laughlin	Betty Hall	Rose Wosepka
Lila Burrow	Maryland Pattee	Joy Hepler
Eloise Caster	Marion Rigg
Edith Stayton

Much credit is due to the business staff for they worked hard to make the play a success. They were:

Business Manager	- - -	Richard H. Gemberling
Property Manager	- - - -	Maynard Rollinson
Assistant Property Manager	- - -	Dan Martin
Stage Manager	- - - - -	Dick Johnson
Assistant State Manager	- - -	George Thaxon
Electrician	- - - - -	Sam Lambert
Wardrobe Mistress	- - - - -	Helen Robinson
Head Flyman	- - - - -	Ralph Berkey

Miss Ann Reely, dramatic coach, deserves a great deal of praise both for her selection of the play and for the coaching of the actors. Dramatic critics have said that the acting could not have been more ably done had it been by professionals.

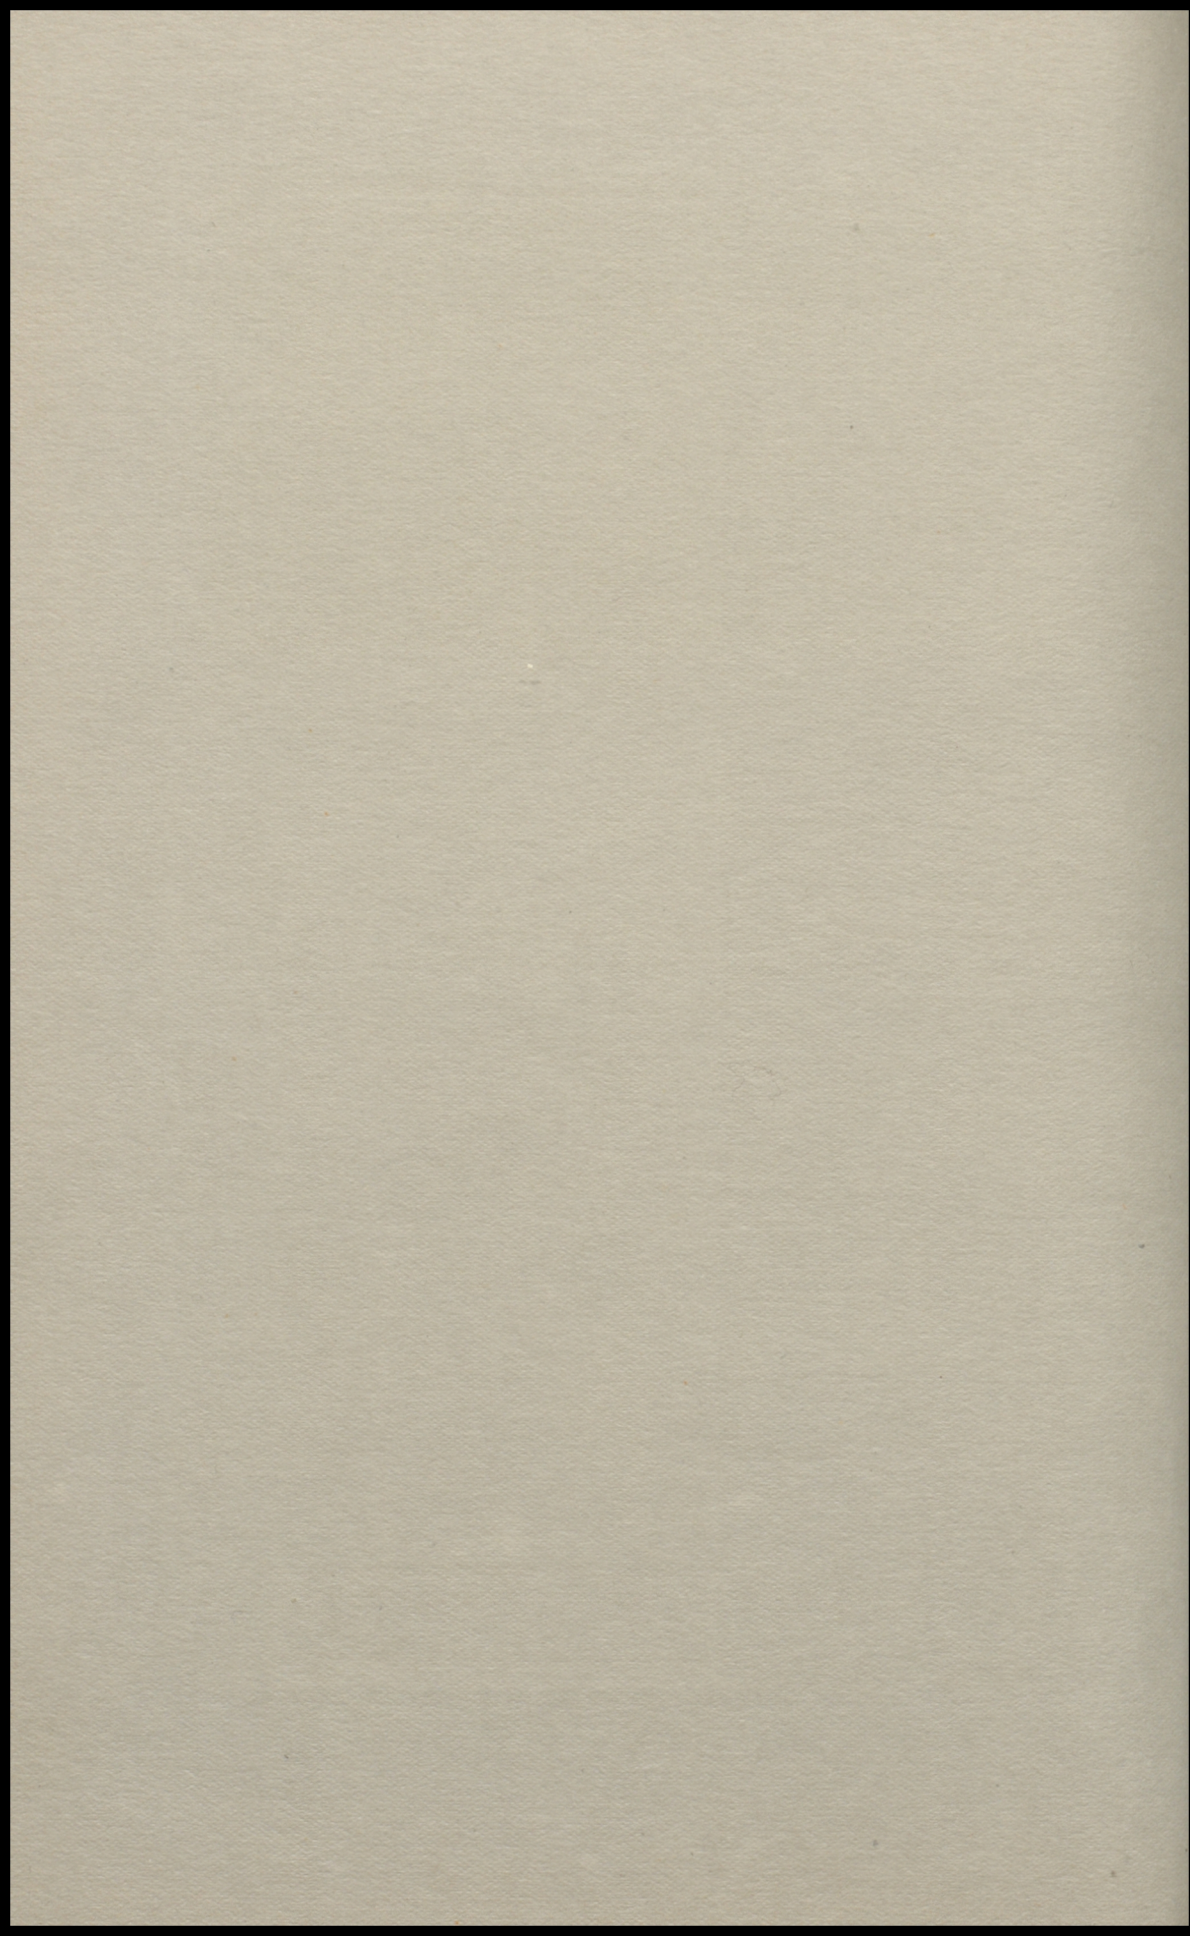

—Angelyn Howells.

HAZEL DEAN

ATHLETICS

Senior A Girls' Basketball Team

First Row—Aileen Livingston, Beatrice Hastings, Ruth Boyle, Anna Kubel, Kathryn Bachman.
Second Row—Alma Heflin, Alice Snape, Ada Snape.

Senior A Basketball

Although they were unable to win the school championship, the Senior "A" Girls' Team, captained by Ruth Boyle, was one of the strongest in the competition. They were, however, eliminated in the finals, leaving the school championship to be contested between the two 11A teams.

A series of three games decided the finals, while a five-game series was played for the championship. Formerly only one game was played in such cases. A great interest was shown by the girls in the tournament since each class had at least one team in the competition while some had two.

—Marguerite Reimers.

Girls' Swimming Team

First Row—Virginia Lambert, Helen Carlson, Minnie Heral.

Second Row—Helen Nance, Jean Worthington, Geraldine Morris, Helen Blaine, Bertha Hoffman, Ruth Taitch, Marie Christenson, Ethel Donohue, Alice Montgomery, Virginia Renz, Isla Ward.

Third Row—Muriel Irving, Harriet Reimers, Mary Bowen, Mary Caroline Cooke, Ruth Boyle, Elizabeth Hewitt, Sarah Swinehart, Jewel Atkinson, Lillian Hill, Esther Anderson.

Fourth Row—Betty Metler, Louise Wilber, Marian North.

Girls' Swimming

The swimming meets with North Central, scheduled for Wednesday, May fourth and eleventh, had not yet been held when the Tiger went to press. However, there were five letter girls on the squad; among these were two members of the June graduating class, Ruth Boyle, and Louise Wilbur. Others who had won their letters were Helen Blaine, Geraldine Morris, and Virginia Renz. Among those turning out for practice who had had previous experience were Marie Christenson, Minnie Heral, Elizabeth Hewitt, Bertha Hoffman, Marguerite Reimers, and Sarah Swinehart.

Ruth Boyle was elected captain of the team and Elizabeth Hewitt acted as manager. These two girls, by jointly making out a permanent record of former competitions, made a distinct contribution to the girls' athletic department.

—Marguerite Reimers.

Basketball

Stepping into the shoes of "Squinty Hunter," who for four years produced teams of championship caliber at Lewis and Clark, Coach Neal D. Nelson came to the front with another city championship five to add to the renown that four years of successful Tigers quintets have spread all over state.

The City Championship

By winning three out of four games from North Central and decisively defeating Gonzaga high school, the Tigers annexed the city championship for the fifth consecutive year.

The same great team that carried off the state championship at Seattle last year showed itself to be of championship caliber still by taking seven of the eight games played during the city championship series.

THE TOURNAMENT AT SEATTLE

The fact that the Bothell high school quintet which eliminated the Tiger players early in the tournament later defeated Yakima for the state championship by the same score somewhat allayed the disappointment that a team of championship caliber felt in being beaten by a comparatively unknown high school in the second round.

On the first day the Tigers won from Buckley, 32 to 9, but were put definitely out of the running in Friday's play when Bothell defeated them in the afternoon. It was a weary and dispirited team that lost to Cashmere 20 to 14 on the evening of their defeat.

Individual honors went to Alfred "Tubby" LeVeaux, when he was named guard on the all-state team for 1927.

THE GRASHIO AWARD

"I have decided to award a gold medal to the outstanding basket ball player of the four city high schools," wrote Tony Grashio, barber at South 15 Wall Street, in a letter to Principal Henry M. Hart on January 21, 1927.

At the close of the basketball season the sport editors of the three local papers, Robert S. Phillips of the Chronicle, Harvey Weaver of the Press, and Eugene H. Russell of the Spokesman-Review, unanimously decided that George McNeil, steady Lewis and Clark forward, was the outstanding player of the series.

The medal was awarded on a basis of teamwork rather than of individual performance.

Baseball

With the first game of the city series with Gonzaga only a week away, the Tiger ball men are showing flashes of mid-season form, although the two practice games with Fort Wright were marred by frequent errors, and played with typical early season form.

A fast infield and a dependable outfield have been built up by coach Campbell because of a comparatively weak battery. At the first of the season he was badly in need of a pitcher to fill the shoes of Leonard Lee, but Harvey Nelson has been showing up well in the practice games, and will probably hold down the position throughout the season with Bowker as an alternate. For the offensive, coach Campbell has a team of unusually heavy hitters.

Lee Hoaglund is holding down the backstop position and first base is being hotly contested between "Wally" Phillips and Gerald Stannard. Grimm at second base, Guter in the shortstop berth, and Odell at the third sack, all veterans from last year, complete the infield. Out in the field Harold Corkery, Byron Johnsrud, and Harold Rowley are running down the long pegs, with ease. Besides these, Ray Newcomb, Howard Bernstein, Paul Bissel, Kenneth McCluskey, Bill Trezona, and Alexander Ward are pressing the veterans hard for their positions.

The first game of the season with Fort Wright was marred by errors on both sides, and the Tiger mitt men finished on the short end of a 16 to 6 score. Bowker started on the mound for the Tigers with Hoaglund catching. In the seventh inning Bowker was replaced by Harvey Nelson, who shut out the strong Fort team for the rest of the game. The performance of Nelson was the one bright spot of the game.

Showing improvement in their second game against the Fort Wright team, the Tigers held the soldiers to a 5-point victory, but were unable to win. The Lewis and Clark team showed real form throughout the game. With Grimm holding down second and Guter fielding grounders like a veteran, the infield worked with a smoothness that had been lacking previously and that gave the team more confidence.

A fast double play in the fourth inning, Guter to Grimm to Stannard, brought a sparkle to the game. It retired the soldiers and marked the end of a hitting spree that put the game on ice for the Fort team.

Storassli and Speeberg starred for the soldiers.

The lineup was as follows:

L. C. (6)		For Wright (11)
Weber	ss		Lowe
Stannard	1b		Storassli
Grimm	2b		Curtis
Guter	3b		Speeberg
Bowker	lf		Hodgins
Foster	cf		Higgins
Bernstein	rf		Spence
Nelson	p		Dominas

Substitutions: Fort Wright, Haroldson for Dominas.
Lewis and Clark, Triplett for Foster.

Tennis

With five lettermen back from the 1926 championship tennis team and a number of first year men making the veterans step lively to keep their places, the prospects of a city championship team look promising. Three meets have been arranged by H. C. G. Fry, tennis coach, with several more as prospects.

The five lettermen back from last year's team are: Roger Hicks, Bob Crane, Robert White, John MacGillvary and Alfred LeVeaux.

Among the others who may be used to fill their places are: Ben Kuttner, Dick Wiley, Joe Mackoff, Graham Martinson, Theodore Jarvion, Neil Flenner, Morris Halpern, Sterlin Ross, Eben Lawmonce, Merrit Winans, Richard Howard, Louis Weiner, Frank Ohme and Louis Powell.

Track

If a championship team can be built from average material through faithful work and a varied training course, the Lewis and Clark team should go far in the 1927 season.

Long jogs over the South hill to develop staying power, varied games in the gym to keep up enthusiasm, and frequent contests in all events to give the work the edge of competition are a part of the program that has been planned by Ira H. Brammell, track coach.

After two months of practice the following boys have stepped into the lead in their various events: Paul Swift, George White, Earl Tichbourne—dashes; Charles Gieger, Gordon Rice, D. Fairbanks—quarter mile; Dean Eshelman, Earnest Roberts, Jack Doyle—half mile; Curtis Odell, Bill Stenton, Nelson Collard—high hurdles; Gerald Walsh, George White, Harry Harding, Wilfred O'Connor—low hurdles; Kenneth Roberts, Jerry Burrus, William O'Neil—mile; Earl Tichbourne, Edwin Atchinson—high jump; Edwin Atchinson, Bob McCoy, Emmet Talkington—pole vault; Paul Swift, Charles Geiger, Earl Tichbourne—broad jump; Joe Mossuto, Don Fox, George White—javelin; Leonard Kuhn, Don Fox, George Stockberger—weights.

Interclass Track Meet

The interclass track meet on Tuesday, April 12, was easily won by the Seniors who took 46 points. The Sophomores placed second with 27 points and the Juniors third with 11. No Freshmen placed in the meet.

Paul Swift was the sensation of the meet when he won the 220 in the fast time of 22 seconds, besides taking firsts in the 100-yard dash and the broad jump. He was the high point man of the contest, and piled up 15 of the 27 Sophomore points.

The 120-yard high hurdles and the 220-yard lows were shortened to 60 yards each, because of the short time that the boys have had for practice, and so it was impossible to compare the time for these events.

A feature of the meet was the performance of Earl Tichbourne, who tied the veteran Edwin Atchinson in the high jump after only a few weeks practice in this event.

The Summary

100-yard dash—Swift, White, Tichbourne.

Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

220-yard dash—Swift, Renshaw, White. Time, 22 seconds.

440-yard dash—Geiger, Rice, Fairbanks. Time, 55 seconds.

880-yard run—Eshelmen, E. Robert, J. Doyle.

Time, 2 minutes, 14 seconds.

High Jump—Tichbourne and Atchinson tied for first place.

Height, 5 feet 5 inches.

Javelin—Mossuto, Fox, White. Distance, 133 feet, 5 inches.

Broad jump—Swift, Geiger, Tichbourne.

Distance, 20 feet, 3 inches.

Pole vault—Talkington, Atchinson, McCoy. Height, 10 feet.

Shot put—Kuhn, Fox, Stockburger.

Distance, 40 feet, 11 inches.

60-yard high hurdles—Collard, Harding, Stenton.

60-yard low hurdles—Walsh, White, O'Connor.

Mile run—K. Roberts, Burrus, Day.

Time, 4 minutes, 56 seconds.

The discus and relay were omitted from the meet.

Swimming

It was a green team, weakened on the eve of the North Central meet by the loss of two potential point earners and not conceded a chance to win even by its most loyal supporters, that surprised coach "Pete" Hupperton by holding the strong Indian aggregation to a 36 to 32 score in the only meet of the season.

The Tiger swimmers pressed the Indian mermen so hard that the result of the meet remained in doubt until the next to the last event, when North Central emerged with a nine point lead that the Tiger swimmers could not balance, although they took the last event on the schedule, the relay.

In the 220-yard dash Jack Lambert, Freshman Tiger swimmer, finished a good half length ahead of Judd, Lewis and Clark, who was swimming in second place, followed closely by Cashatt, North Central.

Tommy Blankenburg, three-year letterman and veteran breast stroke swimmer, fulfilled the expectations of coach "Pete" Hupperton by setting a new city record for the 100-yard breast stroke at 1:14 3-5. A heart-breaking race between Sam Lambert, Lewis and Clark, and Ostrander, North Central, for second place in the same event, in which neither swimmer could break away until the last few feet, where Lambert managed to win by inches, brought cheers from the fans.

Because of his game fight in that event, Sam Lambert was elected captain of 1927 swimming team after the meet.

Jade Things

Jade things
 Carved ornaments on tables—
 Tables oriental—
 Covered with rich tapestry
 Of varied coloring
 That makes more vivid
 Jade things
 Pendants that whiten
 Slim throats of gorgeous women.
 Drops hung from olive ears
 Make sloe eyes glisten
 With unshed tears. . . .
 Bracelets
 Of jagged intricacy:
 Crusted with tinted pearl.
 Jade things
 Whispers in a scented room,
 Murmurs in heavy darkness,
 Thoughts and hopes
 In dingy temples
 Of jade things.

Once upon a time a student took an examination. It was a chemistry exam, than which there are none more absurd. One of the questions was, "Give in detail the process for making mercuric bichloride." In answer to which the student wrote, "God made all things, even mercuric bichloride." Imagine his surprise when he received his corrected exam book and read "God gets the credit. You don't."

It was at the scene of an automobile accident: An old lady in one of the first cars to be stopped by the debris of the smash-up, leaned from her car as a very much battered man, with a hastily arranged bandage around his ankle, hobbled by.

"Oh my," she said, "did you hurt your ankle?"

"Naw, replied the man," I lost both eyes. This bandage slipped down."

A young woman walked into a bank the other day, and stepping up to the window, said:

"I would like to open an account at this bank, please."

Dorothy Delashmutt: "When I started going with you, I thought you were a brave man."

Walter Melrose: "So did everybody else."

Teacher: "And why did Methuselah live to such a ripe old age?"

Blond Child: "Oh, probably just to spite some poor girl who married him for his money."

"They tell me it gets pretty cold up here in the winter."

"Yeah, it does. You know that statute of Lincoln, standing up in the park with his hand on a little negro's head? Well last winter it got so cold that he stuck his hand in his pocket to warm it."

"How is your eye now, Henry?"

"Much better, thank you, since the doctor treated it."

"I hope it will come out all right!"

THE RIGHT WAY

to get a start in the business world is by having an education that is usable in a business office. Some of Spokane's Leading Firms are manned almost exclusively by Blair Trained Office Help. We offer Courses in Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Machine Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Business Correspondence, Salesmanship, Office Methods, Private Secretary.

THE Blair Business College

Have you ever thought of the advantage the young person who is thoroughly trained in Shorthand and Bookkeeping has over the one who has had a general High School Course? We place all our graduates and many under-graduates into positions. More than that—we place every Semester, some of the Lewis and Clark Commercial Graduates into positions.

Let us help you, no matter what course you have taken. Capitalize on your High School Training by doing Post Graduate work in our school this summer. Send for catalog or visit our school.
